

The wisconsin no call / do not call list has virtually eliminated unwanted telemarketing calls to my house. It seems to me that it is working very well, and should NOT be changed. (If I start getting more calls from telemarketers again, I would NOT be very happy.) If you want all states to follow the same no call / do not call guidelines, I think you should look into making the national standard what wisconsin is using - not forcing states with stronger guidelines to give up their stronger guidelines for looser ones.
